of the requirements of the twenty-five-per-Total sales of stocks were 55,779 shares, including: American Sugar, 20,700; Burlington, 2,300; Chicago Gas, 9,200; Pacific Mail, 1,100; Rock Island, 3,900; St. Paul, 2,100. It was a very duil and uninteresting two hours' business on the Stock Exchange Saturday, the only semblance of activity being in Sugar and Chicago Gas. Sugar was sold by brokers supposed to be working for an inside interst, and after a decline of 14. rose 1/2, only to be promptly forced down 11/2, to 831/2, with a final recovery of 1/4. Chicago Gas advanced 1/8, reacted 7/8 and rallied 4. The grangers moved within fractional limits and closed at Friday's closing figures, except Rock Island, which is higher. The market closed heavy. On the week the market, with but few unimportant exceptions, shows a decline in values which is most marked in the industrial shares, but the grangers also participated in the downward movement to a consider-

The bond market was firm for the active issues, but some of the inactive mortgages recorded a slight decline. Advances were made in Grand Rapids & Indiana of 4%. The result of the week's trading is the establishment of a lower level for the greater part of the list traded in, but in some half dozen instances material advances have been recorded, notably 6 per cent. in Peoria & Pekin, Union Pacific seconds and Minnesota & St. Louis seconds, and 3 in Minnesota & St. Louis firsts; Iowa extension, 314; Chicago Gas firsts and Knoxville & Ohio firsts and Southern Ohlo fours, 216. Among the declines are: Louisville & Nashville, 478, and Atchison fours, 215 per cent.

LOCAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE. Trade of the Week Not Up to Expectations-Fluctuations Few. The trade of the week ending Oct. 13 did not reach expectations. The business of the first week of the month led to the belief that the volume this month was to reach old-time proportions, but the first half is away off. In fact, none of the wholesale houses, unless it be groceries and confectionery houses, did the business anticipated. With dry goods men there was fair trade, but by no means as large as in the two or three preceding weeks, and with this more complaint is heard of slow collections. On Commission row nov is the time when the merchants expect to be exceedingly busy, but they complain of quiet trade. In prices there were but few fluctuations. Sugars and coffees, which have been unsettled, carried a steady tone through the week. Provisions, which went off 4c on Monday, have remained steady since. Eggs are 1/2c higher than at the beginning of the week, and poultry 1/20 lower. Irish potatoes are weak at a decline of 5c per bushel for the week. Quinces, grapes and apples are all in abundant supply and seiling low. Iron dealers and hardware men report trade satisfactory, but not up in volume to that of preceding years. The hide market is quiet, prices going off 1/2c all round during the past week. In the local grain market it was an off week, attendance on 'Change small, bidding spiritless and an all round tame market. The week closed with corn a cent lower than on Monday and other cereals practically unchanged, as follows: Wheat-No. 2 red, 48c, No. 3 red, 44c; Corn-No. 1 white, 53c; No. 2 white, 52c; No. 3 white, 53c; No. 4 white, 49c; No. 2 white mixed, 51c; No. 3 white mixed, 50\forallec; No. 4 white mixed, 48c; No. 2 yellow, 51c; No. 3 yellow, 51c; No. 4 yellow, 48c; No. 2 mixed, 51c; No. 3 mixed, 51c; No. 4 mixed, 49c; ear corn, 49c. WOMAN'S AGE OF RULE.

A Young Lady Observer Says that Captivation Ends with Youth. New York Sun.

"Some women fatigue me greatly," said a young lady of observation to the reporter, crumpling up a paper in one hand and reaching for a cigarette with the other. "Now here's one of them has been writing a lot of would-be sentimental stuff to the Bizarre, saying that women have two stages of captivation; the first that of physical charm, and the second that of experience, and that the second state is better than the first. Is it? Well, all I have to say is that I'm not in the least anxious to run for that sort of consolation stakes yet awhile. Just write it down, if you please, that youth is the period of power. don't mean bread-and-butter youth, but the youth of physical charm, just as this writer says, when the bloom is on the cheek and the sparkle in the eye, when the flesh is firm and full, the teeth brilliant, the hair shining, the step light, and the shape lithe'-the years from twenty to

"Now, she's all right there. That's the time when we women are in it-when we boss the whole world. But when she says that there's a 'superior captivation to that exercised by the mere fleshly beauty' she's away off. That time when a woman is no longer exacting and when she aims to make people comfortable is all very well and very lovely, of course, but don't you think for one single instant that it's the best and strongest period in our lives. We can say so, but we don't believe it. We can take our little tin dippers to the still pools of philosophy and say, 'Oh, ain't this delicious and soothing?' but I notice one thing, we're mighty careful not to look at ourselves in the bottom of the dipper, and we've got to get home before the dew falls. No, thank you; I want something not quite so still in mine, and I don't want to know what "Don't mistake me now. I don't mean to say that there are not lots of fascinating middle-aged and old women. The charm of their companionship is delightful. Their graciousness is supreme. Their unselfishness is adorable-and sad. Their knowledge of the heart is great. They are placid and pleasant, As I said just now-that's all right, nobody is saying a word against that state-ment of things; but to say that you must pass thirty-five before you can enter upon your most captivating period-well, now, that just makes me weary.

"Do you mean to tell me that the cleveran in the world, with hish eyes be hind her spectacles, has more powers of captivation than a young woman with eyes like wet sapphires and a skin like a warm rose leaf? Is a learned wrinkle more cap-tivating than a wicked dimple? Is a mouth full of comfort and dentist's work more captivating than the smile of lips that are firm and full, with teeth and gums that look like a split pomegranate? Would you rather be patted on the head with a trembling hand than have me put my arm around your neck? Would you be led away by a blue stocking and a spring-heel galter further than you'd follow a pair of black stockings in French bottines, do you think?

Of course not. "And then, bless my soul, is a woman not supposed to grow brains until after she's thirty-five? Doesn't she get tact un-til she's forty? Hasn't she had any experience before she's fifty? Doesn't know how to make a man comfortable before she's fifty-five? Do you think more of my mother than you do of me, and is my grandmother a more captivating woman than both of us? What nonsense! Why, it's the very horror of life that we've got to grow old, and all the smug philosophy in the world won't change that truth. Calm. contented age is a blessed portion, but we only get it after the hard fight of resigna-tion. It's a time of self-abnegation and reminiscence. But it ain't a time of superior captivation and never will be; and the wise woman, when she gets there will keep her glasses on and not try throwing sheep's eyes at young men when she's warmed up on her third cup of tea."

Drying Tomatoes. Philadelphia Times. With our present facilities for canning and preserving tomatoes in many ways, it might seem strange to think of drying them, but in some countries this is a common thing. In Italy an extensive business is carried on in drying tomatoes to use during portions of the year when the fresh fruit cannot be obtained Tomatoes in that country are grown, for the most part, between rows of grapevines. Sometimes the plants are trained on the lower bars of the rellis to which the vines are attached. The tomatoes are allowed to remain on the branches until ripe. They are then packed and pressed in bags made of coarse cloth, which allows the pulp to pass through, but which retains the seeds and skins. The pulp is then thinly spread out on cloth, pards or in shallow dishes, and exposed to the sun to dry. When it has become quite dry it is broken up fine or ground, and put in boxes or bags, and sent to market. A large part of it is used for souns, but a considerable portion is employed as we use tomatoes when preserved in the or other cans. It is soaked for a few hours in warm water and then cooked in the ordinary manner.

May corn closed 4c lower, May oats %c lower and provisions lower all round. The wheat market opened with a slightly mproved tone, but with very little increased activity. The clearances for the week were heavier than the daily clearances from the Atlantic ports had seemed to indicate. Another reason for returning confidence was found in the steady feeling reported from England and the continent, and the growing necessity which Eastern millers appear to be experiencing of coming to Western commercial wheat entrepots for red winter wheat. Some little strength imparted to the market by a private cablegram from Antwerp reporting an unfavorable outlook for the Argentine crop, was lost, owing to the apparent indifference to such news of the market from which it

THE JAPANESE GIRLS. Society Women Pay Big Wages for Them as Servants.

New York Herald. Japanese girls are in demand for household servants, and that the supply is so limited is owing to the greed with which the women of this land grab up every maid from Japan that gets as far West as New Few indeed are these Japanese women who seek employment so far from their native land, but priceless treasures are they to those lucky enough to secure them. The fed, if so it may be called, for Japan-ese so ints was started many years ago when omraodore Perry, in command of a fleet of United States war ships, made a visit to China and Japan. It was the occasion of the opening up of Japan to the commerce of the United States, and the officers were not slow in appreciating the vast efficiency of the Japanese and the lazy indifference of the average cabin boy shipped in the United States.

Now the majority of naval officers have wives, and wives as a rule wish to know just what their husbands have been doing and why they have been doing it. Consequently the naval officers called upon to explain the superiority of the Japanese as servants, and though profane history hath it not in its annals, it may be substantiated that more than one cabin "boy" of the United States navy was not a boy, but a girl. However, be such the case as it may, the seed was sown and a great demand for Japanese servants sprang up.

Especially was this so on the Pacific coast. There the steamers from Japan find a port, and the Japanese land and meet with the first check in the land that they have sought for fame and fortune. The rates of Western railroads will hold even a native of Illinois in check when the fare from San Francisco to New York is quoted, and when the unsophisticated Jap girl runs up against this demand she sees the sinking of a fortune in the piece of pasteboard and decides to remain at the Golden Gate. It is nearer home, and the Jap always wants to feel that home may be reached some time before death. But few women of Japan do reach New York, and once here they have no reason to regret their choice of a domicile, for they command wages far in excess of other nationalities, and the reasons for this are many and strong. In the first place the Japanese girls are well brought up. That is, they are taught the great lesson of obedience at a very early age, and the lesson is so impressed upon them that it is never forgotten. They are docile, and they can be taught almost anything in a very short space of time. Unlike the Chinese, the Japs learn intelligently. John or Jane Chinaman will learn a thing, but it will be as a parrot learns-not understandingly, but by rote. With the Japs to learn the rules of a house is to understand the work required of them, and o take an intelligent interest in its per formance. Rapid to learn, quick to absorb ideas and full of a certain savoir faire, the Japanese make model servants, as several New York women will testify. Women are proverbially more tractable and easier to teach than men, so the qual-ities discovered by the officers in the United States navy to be a part of the male Japanese character are intensified in the fe-males who reach New York.

I paid a visit to the Japanese consulate this week in order to ascertain how great the demand for Japanese maid servants was, and why they were so much in de-The consul told me that the Japanese made the best servants not because they had been trained in the way of service at home, but simply because they were home bodies, and grew to love any one who was kind to them. The devotion of the Japan-ese to their friends has never been questioned, and this trait extends from the highest to the lowest classes. When, therefore, a Japanese girl comes to this country and goes into service, she makes her interests the same as her employer's.

And with a twinkle in his eye he added: They do not have so many sweethearts, you call them, as the Irish giris." In a family up town, whose entertain-ments are noted for exclusiveness and novelty, the only waiter permitted is a Japanese girl. She is the perfection of a servant, and is not the least of the attractions to Dressed in her national costume, picturesque, modest and quiet, moving about noiselessly in her high-heeled slippers, she adds a charm that is lacking in many another house more pretentious and more am-The Japanese girls are very quick in pick-ing up the language of the country, and, while they soon adapt themselves to our customs, they never lose that fascination In a few weeks a detachment of forty to fifty young women from the land of the Mikado is expected to arrive here, and al-ready applications for over double the num-

The secretary to the legation said to me: "The trouble is not to find places for the girls, but to find women who will be good nistresses to them. We can find a place for every Japanese girl who comes to New York at a few hours' notice, but what we must investigate is the reference of em-

The reason given for closing the famous track is that the laws of Illinois too freely admit of the prosecution of pool sellers, and without this feature the track cannot be successfully operated. ing, but upon Harte's earnestly pleading his immediate need of money Mr., Labouchers hastily examined the production. Then ne returned it with the remark: "I cannot use this trash."
"But, my God!" exclaimed Harte, "I'm starving. "What do you want for it?" inquired "Is it worth a pound?" said Harte, with an expression indicating that his heart was crawling up in the vicinity of his "Worth a pound! It is not worth the paper it is written on," raged Labouchere. "If you want charity I can give you a few shillings, but it would be accompanied by advice to the effect that a strong, able bodied man like you can make more money and give less cause of offense by seeking employment at hop-picking or enlpping before the mast. Instead of attempting to worm your way into journalism, why did you not join the expedition for the relief of General Gordon. Who are you, anyway?" "Bret Harte," was the answer, as the
